Miss Lucile Ellis, Hopkinsville, B. A.

Miss Lois Irvan, Murray, Ky., B. A.

Miss Mary Carr, Clarksville, Tenn., Music.

Miss Carr graduated last year and returned for a post-graduate course in music.

Among the various honors awarded were certificates to four young ladies who answered every roll call during the ten months. They were Misses Laura Thurmond, Martha Furlong, Lottie Baker and Gertrude Gary. Miss Louise Stegar was not not absent the last five months.

Prof. Harrison's address was earnest, appropriate and at times eloquent, as he urged the young ladies to strive for higher ideals and noble purposes in life.

He announced the retirement of two teachers, of whom he spoke most kindly, and said the faculty would have but two changes, Miss Ruby Holliday, of South Carolina, to take the place of Miss Susong, and Miss Georgia Bowden to assist in the primary department. After the exercises were over the young ladies held a reception in the college parlors until eleven o'clock.

THE ALUMNAE DINNER.

The annual dinner of the Alumnae Society of Bethel Female College was held at Hotel Latham at two o'clock, with covers laid for 32.

After the course luncheon had been served, there were several talks during which Mrs. James H. Anderson gracefully presided as Toastmistress.

Mrs. John B. Trice extended the formal welcome to the out-of-town members.

She was followed by Mrs. Mimms of the class of 1858 and Mrs. Pettus of 1859, both of Todd county, who made most entertaining talks about the earlier days of the college.

Mrs. R. A. Burnett, of 1858, was also present.

Miss Mildred Wharton, of Trigg county, spoke feelingly and most entertainingly of "The Old Tree," the giant oak that stands in the college campus, which is supposed to be more than 100 years old.

Mrs. T. C. Underwood closed with a toast to "The Old Girls," explaining in the beginning that none of the "Old Girls" were present. Her talk, like that of Miss Wharton, was bright and very entertaining.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Dr. Allen G. Hall to Deliver Baccalaureate Address.

The annual opening session of the Henry Clay Society at the tabernacle opened the Public School Commencement Wednesday night. A debate, music and presentations made up the programme. A big crowd attended.

To-night at the same place the regular exercises will close the session. There will be orations, recitations, music and a class address to be delivered by Dr. Allen G. Hall, of Vanderbilt University, a Christian county "boy."

A small fee of 10 cents will be charged to defray hall rent.

Diplomas will be given to nine graduates.

DECORATION DAY

Graves of Union Soldiers Will be Strewn With Flowers.

Appropriate Exercises at Court House in the Afternoon.

This is national Decoration Day. Those usually having the matter in charge have arranged for an appropriate observance of the day here.

At 10 o'clock in the morning the old soldiers and their families and friends will assemble at the court house and go in a body to Riverside Cemetery and decorate the graves of the men who wore the blue in the greatest civil war the world has ever known.

At 1 o'clock p. m. there will be appropriate exercises in the circuit court room. These exercises, if the usual order is observed, will consist of addresses and patriotic songs. It is expected that a large crowd will be out both morning and afternoon.

The postoffice will be open only from 9:30 to 10:30 p. m., just one hour.

The city carriers will make only one delivery in the morning.

All of the rural carriers will be off duty to-day, and consequently no one on their routes can receive any mail until to-morrow.

All the banks in the city will be closed for the day.

The offices in the court house will be pretty well deserted, though somebody will probably be about the office of the sheriff to attend to important matters.

KIAH WAS HOT.

Told Grand Jury of His Suspicious.

Kiah Malone, of Gracey, whose plant bed was sowed in grass seed last spring, went before the grand jury at Cadiz last week and gave his testimony. He is reported to have expressed his suspicious of one of his neighbors, remarking significantly that he believed he sowed it, but he was not certain or he would have settled the matter with his shot gun.

Growth of the Poultry Industry

The growth of the poultry industry in the United States is one of the marvels of the time. The American Standard of Perfection, as drafted and copyrighted by the American Poultry Association, names over a hundred varieties of fowls, all of which are due to the development of man except one. The original fowl was a comely, wild thing, which made its home in the jungle along with the rest of the primeval creation. It is a long call from this ancient fowl of ungainly proportions to the lordly Langshan or the massive Cochon of the present day, but the ancestry is certain. The relation can be traced back farther than the time of Christ.

Europe, Asia and America all have contributed to the development of the poultry family, and the many and varied strains that now exist are the result of centuries of improvement. England and America have been foremost in the work, however, and the results accomplished by the fanciers in these two countries in recent years have been nothing short of remarkable. By intelligent breeding these fanciers have produced fowls of all sizes, from the diminutive Bantam to the mammoth Bronze Turkey, one a tiny bit of feathers and vanity, weighing only a few ounces, and the other a bulky fowl weighing from forty to sixty pounds.

Results equally as wonderful have been accomplished in color effects. There are varieties in red, black, brown and white, with nearly all possible combinations, besides buff and Andalusian blue. Not content with this, the fanciers have shown that they can lace, stripe, spangle or bar the feathers of their birds in any way to satisfy their individual fancy. In fact, it seems that about all there is left for them to do along this line is to put their initials on the feathers of their birds, which in the light of what they have already done, is not as impossible as it may sound.

The pigeon fanciers have kept pace with the poultrymen, and the results they have obtained are truly wonderful. They have given us the gorgeous Fan Tail, a little bird with a tail big enough to almost tilt its body out of kilter. In the case of the Fan Tail the fanciers have simply bred to a deformity. The improved strain is merely a line bred monstrosity. Some fellow found a pigeon in his flock with a tail feather turned the wrong way. He got the idea that a bird with all its tail feathers turned the wrong way would be a good thing, so he sought a mate for his freak, paired them, and the Fan Tail was soon with us. Along comes another fellow who thought he would like to see a pigeon with two rows of feathers turned the wrong way. We now have them with three rows, and the end seems far off. These Fan Tails have all the vanity of Solomon. In their coops they droop about with very little show of life, but when taken out they immediately spread their ample fans and strut about as pompous as you please. When placed in front of a mirror they try to outdo the image in the glass, and the attempt is something laughable.

As a close second to the Fan Tails come the wonderful Tumblers. There are two kinds, Indoor and Outdoor Tumblers. The parlor performers will turn somersaults in the most artistic manner. The outdoor specie will sail up in the air several hundred feet, and then fall suddenly downward, turning over and over as they come. They right themselves before they reach the ground, soar skyward again, and perform the same astonishing gyrations until you tire of the performance. The explanation of the Tumbler is simple. The breeder found a crazy bird, a little fowl with an insane desire to turn over continuously. He bred to the freak, and brought forth the clever Tumbler to astonish the old folks and delight the little ones. What will these fanciers do next?

The successful fancier breeds for beauty and utility combined. If he desires to create a new strain, he must be an imaginative soul. He must erect in his mind's eye an ideal fowl, and then persevere in his endeavor to produce one like it. He jots down a description of his visionary bird from beak to toe nail. If he prefers to go by the Standard, he will find that very exacting. Every detail is looked to scrupulously length and color of comb, arch of neck, length and breadth of beak, design and color of plumage, etc. Having decided upon an ideal, he mates his birds and starts his strain, picking from each brood the most perfect specimens and gradually working toward his ideal through generation after generation. It is a sort of partnership arrangement with the Almighty; the fancier attends to the matings, and sees that they are properly cared for, while the Lord does the rest.

It requires much time and patience to breed a line up to anything approaching perfection, but once attained the reward is well worthy of the effort. Single birds have sold in this country for as much as $1,000, while in England still higher prices have been paid for individual specimens. The breeder does not depend altogether upon fancy prices for individual birds, however, for his returns. He profits by the increased productiveness of his flocks. For instance, in the matter of egg laying it may be cited that the average American hen lays about one hundred eggs per year. The practical poultryman goes in for better results, and gets them. Numerous instances show whole flocks with an average of 200 eggs to the hen per year—an increase of 100 per cent. If this increase in productiveness could be taken advantage of all along the line by people raising chickens, the sum realized annually would add millions of dollars to the national wealth. Furthermore, the benefit derived would not cease with the additional cash in hand. Nature's two natural foods are milk and eggs. Egg is everything that goes into flesh and bone. These are facts worth knowing as we take an invoice of the possibilities of Mrs. Hen.

The three most prominent members of the large poultry family in this country are the Leghorns, the Wyandottes and the Plymouth Rocks. The Leghorns are the egg type. They are long in body, light in weight and very active. Their average frequently runs as high as 200 eggs per year to the hen. The Wyandottes are strictly an American production. They are short in body, plump, round and heavier than the Leghorns. They have full breast development, have yellow legs and skin, and consequently show up well when dressed. Their meat is tender, has fine grain and good flavor, and they are the ideal table fowl, either as broilers, weighing from one-half to a pound and a half, or as roasters, weighing from three to five pounds. The Plymouth Rocks are very similar to the Wyandottes, except their bodies are longer, and they will weigh a pound more at maturity. The Barred Plymouth Rock is the great American all-purpose bird; the kind the farmer, the fancier and all swear by. The Wyandotte is a later breed and is fast growing in popularity, especially with the breeders, but the old standbys, the Barred Rocks, will doubtless hold their supremacy for many years.

When poultry shows were first held a few years ago they were very small affairs, usually pulled off in some empty store room or other building that could be hired cheap. Five or six exhibitors would enter from fifty to 250 fowls, and then dig down in their pockets to make good the shortage in expenses. Now it is different. The poultry show is a decided event. In New York the annual show is held in the great Madison Square Garden, in Boston in Mechanics Hall and in Chicago in the Seventh regiment armory. The Associated Press reduced rates, the railroad reports and thousands of people turn out to see the feathered beauties. At these big shows the number of fowls on exhibition average from 4,000 to 6,000, some of them worth a few dollars, and others worth a few hundred dollars.

We think we have the fever pretty bad nowadays when we plank down several hundred dollars for a few pounds of chicken flesh, proportioned to suit our fancy and feathered to suit our taste, but history relates that our forefathers were not so delirious in enthusing over the same subject. While the Hollanders were going daffy over tulips and paying $1,000 for a single bulb, poultrymen in this country were giving from $25 to $50 per egg for sittings that promised to be the Wright sort and thinking little of it. Messrs. Horace Greeley and P. T. Barnum were charter members of the New York Poultry Association, and both of these well-known American characters had much to do with the early development of thoroughbred fowls in this country.

These gentlemen were instrumental in the importation of the first Asiatic fowls seen here. According to all accounts, the lank, angular Shanghai when first brought over were a sight to behold. They were tall enough to eat corn off the top of an ordinary barrel stood on end, and were as ravenous as wolves. Few people would suspect that the fluff, dainty Cochon, the recognized beauty of the poultry family, is the direct descendant of this tall, awkward Chinese fowl, yet such is the case. The Cochon is a most ample testimonial to the skill of the breeder.

Many of American's noted people have been and are now interested in the development of poultry. When Rutherford B. Hayes' term of office expired as President of the United States, he went into the chicken business; Grover Cleveland is heavily interested in the industry; John D. Rockefeller got his start by feeding chickens for the market; Levi P. Morton was an enthusiast over fine fowls; the Havemeyers, of sugar fame, raise thousands of chickens each year; while on the other side of the water King Edward is an enthusiastic fancier, and many of the members of the English nobility take great interest in the science of producing fine specimens.

A Louisville man has left a provision in his will bequeathing the family Bible to the first one of his children who marries.

Now that the season for scraping plant beds is about over, it would be a good idea if the night riders would turn their attention to the Canada thistles while their hooves are still sharp.

It is announced from Frankfort that the chances for a trip of the soldier boys to Jamestown are very slim, on account of the railroad rates. The news has killed the proposed organization of a new company at Frankfort.

Dr. Sarah Murphy, the alleged abortionist, charged with killing a country girl by a criminal operation, was acquitted in Louisville by peremptory instructions from Judge Pryor. She was defended by Aaron Kohn and J. T. O'Neal.

The Saturday Evening Post sent a special correspondent here this week to write a history of the "Night Riders" and their operations in Western Kentucky. With the feuds of the mountains, the frauds in Louisville and the felonies in the tobacco counties, poor old Kentucky is getting a bad reputation away from home.

A monument to the late Col. Jere Baxter was unveiled at Nashville Monday. A large gathering was on hand to pay honor to the memory of the man who built the Tennessee Central Railroad and gave Nashville the benefits of railway competition. Hopkinsville, which gave $10,000 to the railroad, was not asked to take part.

Any one of the four things in the June American Magazine would have made the number a good one: Edw. Leffere's character sketch of Harriman, Ellis Parker Butler's story of "Wetter New York in 1913," Ray Stannard Baker's account of "The Negro in Southern City Life," or Ida M. Tarbell's story of Grover Cleveland's great fight of 1887.

The sending of the Jim Hargis case to Elliott county has about killed the State's case. Judge M. M. Redwine declines to act in the case and the commonwealth's attorney will have nothing to do with it.

and no effort has been made, to take the witnesses across the mountain roads to Sandy Hook. What started out as a bloody tragedy is about to end in a roaring farce.

McClure's Magazine for June contains more important and entertaining reading than one could expect to find in three numbers of any magazine. Ellen Terry contributes her charming and fascinating "Memories of My Childhood" that give stories of her wonderful girlhood, and her debut, and pictures of the actors and the English stage of fifty years ago. "By Airship to the North Pole," by the arctic explorer, Walter Wellman tells about his airship and the dash he will make in it to the North Pole this summer. C. P. Connolly reaches an astounding climax in his "Flight of the Copper Kings" when he narrates the terrible underground battles of Heinze and Amalgamated miners.

Beside its five stirring articles, the June McClure's has six brilliant and entertaining stories.

NOTHING DOING.

Trigg County Night Riders Came Out All Right.

The Trigg County grand jury has adjourned and the "night riders" are breathing easy again. Fire Marshal Mott Ayers sent to John Kelly all the papers in the celebrated Wallonia case, but no indictment was returned. The Marshal declined to go to Cadiz, as he did not think it worth while. He will continue his prosecution in other courts. He kept photographic copies of the papers sent to Cadiz. The Fire Marshal says he was treated with scant courtesy, by the officers and the grand jury showed its opinion of the Marshal's evidence by issuing a card of "complete exoneration."

THERE SHOULD BE

More Arrests for Cruelty to Animals.

Henry Lewis, colored, was arrested Tuesday, tried and fined $11 for cruelty to his horse. The officer who made the arrest says that Henry's horse stuck a nail in one of his feet last winter and the hoof finally came off. Lewis was working the animal to a wagon all the time the poor horse was suffering the greatest possible pain, though the owner had a large shoe made for it. He says so great was the pain that the dumb brute endured that he was trembling constantly.

There are probably more broken down, lame and starved animals made to work in the city than any place of its size in the state. Time and again have we been appealed to, by ladies and gentlemen to raise a voice against this cruelty and we have done so. The officers are apologetic to it and are ready to do all they can if the people will only notify them and appear against the offenders whenever they are arraigned in court. We have often spoken of the necessity for organizing a society for the prevention of cruelty to animals but no one has taken the initiative. We have done our part and have the officers. It remains for the people to do theirs also. Merely complaining avails nothing. Do something if you want the evil stopped.

A Significant Prayer.

Frankfort, Ky., May 28.—Judge James E. Cantrill's resignation as a justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals was accepted to-day by Gov. Beckham.

Gov. Beckham appointed John D. Carroll as his successor. The regular election will occur next November.

Judge Carroll has been acting as Court Commissioner for the last fifteen months, an office created by the last Legislature.

CITY COURT

Imposed a Total of $596.50 Fines During May.

77 Arrests Made During Month, and Less Than April.

The month of May was not very active in police circles. During the month, up to yesterday morning, there had been 77 arrests, against 86 for April.

The total fines assessed amounted to $596.50. Part of the fines were levied but $272.50 in cold cash was collected and paid into the city treasury.

May was an average month, or a little under, for evil-doers. Not that the people, probably, are growing more law-abiding, but that the prompt arrest of offenders is dreaded. The officers are vigilant and are anxious to maintain order and evil-doers are beginning to realize the fact more and more every day that the police play no favorites.

In recognition of their efficiency and the fine work they have done under the present administration the whole force is now wearing handsome uniforms and Stetson hats, given them by the council. A better looking lot of officers can not be found anywhere. They are always on the alert, are polite, and in fact each "fills the bill" as the ideal policeman.

FORMER MINISTER.

Has Landed In Federal Toils At Richmond, Va.

The Clarksville Leaf-Chronicle says: "John Thompson Hargrave, formerly rector of the Trinity Episcopal Church in this city, is in jail in Richmond, Va., on the charge of fraudulently using the mails. His arrest grew out of a letter sent to the Tennessee-Kentucky Tobacco Company on which he secured merchandise.

A batch of letters from attorneys and business houses and numerous bills of lading in the hands of the Richmond inspector are their cause for the statement that within the past six months Hargrave has swindled one hundred business houses of upwards of $100,000 in portable property.

In 1903, after a communication between Bishop Gibson, of Virginia, and Bishop Cuneo Brewster, of Cincinnati, Hargrave was expelled from the Episcopal Church as the result of complaints made against him by members of the denomination in Hanover County.

In Memory.

One Sunday, May 19, 1907, the Angel of Death entered the home of John R. Dickerson, and departing, bore away the spirit of the beloved wife and mother.

Alice Childress was born in Virginia more than fifty years ago. When scarcely more than a girl she was married to John R. Dickerson, and came to Bennetts-town, Ky., where they have since lived.

To this union were born four children, two sons and two daughters. One son died in infancy. Judson, the second son, preceded his mother to the grave seven years ago. The daughters, Mrs. W. D. Carter and Mrs. J. C. Calhoun, with the devoted husband, are left to mourn their loved one.

Dear Vada and Lula, your mother has left you. Not only have you lost a good mother, but the community has lost one of its best, noblest women.

It had been my privilege to know Mrs. Dickerson intimately for sixteen years. I never heard her speak an angry word, or evil of any one. She was noted for her hospitality to strangers. None ever applied in vain to her for food and shelter.

Truly she hath scattered her bread upon the waters, and we have the blessed assurance that it will be returned unto her.

How often have I heard her breathe this prayer in song. "When ends life's transient dreams, When death's cold sullen streams Shall o'er me roll.

Blest Savior, then in love, Fear and distrust remove, Oh bear me safe above.

A ransomed soul? Life's transient dream is ended to our loved one, and the Savior in whom she trusted will answer her prayer. She is a ransomed soul, awaiting in glory the loved ones she left on earth.

May the Lord comfort them in their distress and may we all live so that when death comes to us, we too may be ransomed souls.

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

NEAR PEMBROKE

The Night Riders Commit Fresh Outrage.

Another visitation of night riders was made in the Pembroke neighborhood Saturday night. The plantation of J. W. Hammock & Son was scoured and entirely destroyed. It contained 200 or 300 yards. Mr. J. W. Hammock is the father of Henry Hammock whose bed was sowed in grass seed early in the season. Other farmers whose beds were sowed in the same vicinity were Dr. W. A. Lackey, B. D. Lackey, Davis Burrus, Ben Burrus and Wm. Dossett. Some of these victims have since joined the Association and will try to get plants from their neighbors. Henry Hammock will not attempt to raise a crop, as he says he wants to sell out and leave the country. The elder Hammock had set only 500 hills and he will not have plants for a crop.

BACK FROM SCHOOL

To Spend "The Good Old Summer-Time at Home."

A bevy of young ladies arrived Friday night, last, from school to go their homes in different parts of the county. The crowd was composed of Misses Nannie Malone, Fena Trice, Jennie Coleman, Maymie Robinson, Mary Henson, Mae Karb, Mary Smith, Freda Pickens, Olive Waller and Freda Pickens. All of them had been attending Logan College, Russellville, and looked bright and happy in anticipation of spending "the good old summer-time at home."

After stepping from the train they treated the crowd to the college yell.

Kidney Diseases Are Too Dangerous for Hopkinsville People to Neglect.

The great danger of kidney trouble is that they get a firm hold before the sufferer recognizes them. Health is gradually undermined. Backache, headache, nervousness, weakness, soreness, lumbago, urinary troubles, dropsy, diabetes and Bright's disease follow in merciless succession. Don't neglect your kidneys. Cure the kidneys with the certain and safe remedy, Doan's Kidney Pills, which has cured people right here in Hopkinsville.

Mrs. W. L. Johnson, of 615 Jessup Ave., Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "My husband suffered for several years with kidney complaint which made its presence known by a most severe aching in his back and which often became so bad, especially in the morning when rising or at an occasion when he was obliged to do considerable stooping or lifting that he could scarcely move about. It occurred to him while reading an advertisement in our local papers about Doan's Kidney Pills that they might at least give him some relief and acting on the thought he went to Thomas & Traher's drug store and got a box. Their use proved the merits of the remedy. The aches and pains were relieved and the other symptoms disappeared. I have the best of reasons to recommend Doan's Kidney Pills and am confident that in every case they do all that is represented for them."

The above illustration represents the several active medicinal plants which enter into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Stands Alone The one and only medicine for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments. The ingredients of which are printed and placed upon every bottle wrapper leaving the great laboratory in Buffalo, N. Y., where it is made, in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Stands Alone Not only in respect to its known composition, but also as the only specific advertised remedy for women's diseases which absolutely contains no alcohol.

It Stands Alone As the one medicine for women, the makers of which take patients fully into their confidence and tell them exactly what they are taking. This Dr. Pierce can afford to do because his "Favorite Prescription" is made of such ingredients and after working formula that has thousands of cures to credit—thus placing its merits above criticism.

Old Toomey's Will

By Joseph Powell.

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

The lawyer said it was the strangest will he had ever helped to draw up. He felt he owed an apology to the relations of the deceased, gathered in old Toomey's parlor after the funeral, for his phraseology.

There were twelve strange anxious eyes upon the little lawyer at that moment. There was Shaun Kelly and old Regan, Susan Mullen, Frank Murtagh, Tom Gaynor and as many more again, all expecting of something out of the pile Toomey was known to have received some years before, under the will of an American man. Some said it was $100,000, some $200,000. Toomey had spent very little of it.

His nearest relation was Tom Gaynor, who—as it was said—expected to come in for the bulk of the American hoard. He was a proud, hard old man, with a large farm of land, wealthy, as wealth goes in Ireland, but as grasping of the penny as if he had nothing. His pride was significantly displayed in the way he treated the authors for the hand of his pretty daughter Kitty.

Kitty Gaynor had fixed her affections on the poorest of her suitors, Frank Murtagh. He also was a relation of the dead man. On the death of his parents Toomey had taken him into his house out of charity, and had never ceased to remind him of it.

But all suspense would soon be at an end, for the lawyer had commenced to read the will.

Various bequests were made until Frank Murtagh and Tom Gaynor were the only persons left unmentioned. Gaynor was the man, all felt sure.

The lawyer had paused to cough and take a little water. Then he continued:

"And to that sorrow-may-care black-guard, Frank Murtagh, I bequeath the house and land about it on condition that he never sells it for less than $200 for the far field, $300 for the near one and the house, which is five times more than any man in his senses would think of giving. My old clothes can go to that stinky nigger Tom Gaynor. I'll make him remember that he treated me like a dog when I was poor and fawned on me when he thought I was rich. And there's my old bamboo stick in the corner that I leave to Frank Murtagh, the lazy rogue, to belt the mean old fellow off these premises any time he dare show his nose here, house or land. I make this duty a condition of Frank Murtagh's enjoying what I leave him."

"Then the lawyer and mourners had departed, Frank was left in the sole possession of his newly-acquired property and his thoughts. His mind naturally reverted to Kitty. Wondering what this little stroke of fortune bring her nearer to him? He was forced to admit that it would not. He was still very far from the standard of competency required by old Tom. His eyes suddenly fell upon the bamboo stick which leaned against the wall in a corner of the room and he could not restrain a smile as he thought of its association with old Tom in the will.

"Begar," said Frank, as he took it up and lashed the air, "that'll come down heavy on old Tom's back if he dares show his nose in here."

But neither Frank nor the rest of old Toomey's relations would have thought of the demagogue at all, strange as they knew him to be, passing in the old gentleman's mind at that moment.

"I can laugh at the whole of them, Toomey and all," he said to himself. "Lord have mercy on the old ruffian's soul, but I can see him as plain now as I saw him a month ago in the duck of the evening, dragging across the iron pot and digging a hole near that tree on the hill and burying it there, thinking that no one would ever get his money. Ha, ha, Pat Toomey, the very man you hate the most will get it."

Forgetting the dead man's warning, he crossed the gate and entered the field. Frank perceived the movement from the kitchen window, and mindful of his testamentary obligations, he snatched up the bamboo stick and charged down on old Tom, making wild shouts as he ran.

The whirling bamboo recalled certain terms of old Toomey's will to Tom's mind. He turned tail, scrambled over the gate and was outside the zone of danger in no time.

"Ye deserve the greatest credit," cried he gaily, when Frank had reached the gate. "Ye do yer jooty like a man."

"Begar, it's a terrible hard way to have to trate a neighbor," said Frank with an air of apology. "Ould Toomey was a very queer man."

Tom dismissed the matter with a cheery laugh, and they parted. After supper Tom sat by the fire scheming as to the best means of becoming possessed of the buried treasure. The only course left was to buy the land. It gave him a chill to think of the prohibitive price old Toomey had put upon it in the will.

All he had to do in the morning, he was raised and Frank entered. He had hoped to find Tom out and Kitty alone. But Kitty and the maid had gone to bed.

"Just the man I wanted to see," said Tom, and after a short dicker, the far field became the property of Tom.

When his footsteps had died away, old Tom, creeping cautiously into the stable, emerged with a spade.

In a moment he was climbing the hillside. He remembered passing the place where Toomey had buried the treasure. After laboring for half an hour, his spade ran upon iron. He knew he had the pot. His breath left him in the excitement of the moment.

Gasp, struggling, stumbling across the field, Tom reached home, more dead than alive. There with remarkable deliberation, considering his agitation, he untied the rope that bound the sack.

Tom gazed vacantly at the sight that met his eye.

"Sand, stones," was all he was able to ejaculate for a moment.

He turned out the contents of the pot.

"Blar an ouns," he said, when he was able to speak. "Toomey was the wickedest old scoundrel I ever knew. Had cess to him," and old Tom went off to bed cursing.

When the first pang of his disappointment was over, the lesser pain of the loss of his £200 called for attention. He knew Frank to be a simple good-natured fellow.

Untied the Rope That Bound the Sacking.

With this idea in his mind, he set out after breakfast to call on Frank. Frank wondered what he wanted. Was it something about Kitty? He was grievously disappointed when a minute later Tom plunged into the business about the cheque.

Despair chilled Frank's blood for a moment. He had hoped that the money would give him the start that would enable him in time to claim Kitty. In a moment, however, the cloud had disappeared from his good-natured soul. He walked over to a cupboard in the corner of the room, pulled out a wooden box, drew therefrom the cheque and handed it across to Tom Gaynor.

"More power to ye," cried Tom. "Ye're the best fella in Ireland. Tell me if I can do anything for ye. If I can, command me, command me."

"Give me Kitty, then," returned Frank with brusque boldness.

"We all know," said the old man, "that ould Toomey never spent the money he got by the American uncle. Shure it's about this house it must be. Have ye ever searched for it?"

"I have, indeed," returned Frank. "Well, then, look here," said old Tom. "I'll tell ye what I'll do. Keep up your search for it and I'll give ye Kitty when ye find it."

While old Tom had been talking, Frank's eyes, wandering about the room, had suddenly lighted upon the bamboo stick.

"Begar!" he cried, jumping up and running over to the corner for the stick. "What have I been thinking of at all? Get out of this, Toomey! Remember the words of the will, man. Shure I'll lose the place for letting ye stay here."

"Are ye gone?" cried Frank, turning round and waving the stick menacingly.

Luckily for Tom, the gate of the yard was open, and he reached safety with only a yard to spare.

As Tom drew up to the middle of the road, gasping for breath, Frank held out the stick, broken across the middle.

"Begar! Ould Toomey's bamboo is done for," said he. "But what's this here?" peering into the slit. "The stick, broke and all as it is, is held together by something inside the choob—pater, by the look of it."

Frank thrust his fingers and drew out a roll of papers.

"Wonders what it can mean?" murmured old Tom, who had taken up the roll and opened it. "Why, it means that these are blank of England notes, fifty, one hundred pound notes there are in my fist this blessed minute."

The pair stood there gasping at each other.

"This must be ould Toomey's American money," said Frank, and awe gaped from his eyes as he gazed from the split bamboo to the precious pieces of paper in his hand.

"That's just what it is," cried Tom. "Frank, my boy, I congratulate ye."

"And — and — and —" murmured Frank, his voice broken with agitation.

A GOOD CHANCE

To Contribute to the Confederate Drinking Fountain.

Help the Ladies and Get Your Fill of Strawberries and Cream.

The ladies are determined to succeed in their efforts to raise a fund for putting up the Confederate drinking fountain on Main street. Of course everybody would like to see them succeed, but merely wishing them success does not help them. They want contributions of money.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy will give a strawberry, cream and cake feast at the city court room next Saturday afternoon and they invite everybody to patronize them. After the feast is over they will have an auction sale of cakes. This will give the members of the chapter and other ladies a fine opportunity to have cake Sunday without the trouble of baking.

It is useless to urge enterprising citizens to encourage the U. D. C.'s in their undertaking to add to the beauty of Main street by putting up a handsome fountain. They certainly will do this from civic pride, but everybody alike ought to feel interested in establishing the fountain, as it will be a starter to further adornment of our thoroughfares.

The added beauty to our residence streets by the disappearance of front fences is the cause of remark everyday, and it is probable that the little park at the intersection of Ninth and Belmont streets, in front of South Kentucky College, will be a reality before the summer is gone.

Thus it is, one good thing brings another, and it is hoped that everybody can see their way in helping the ladies Saturday in adding to the Confederate fountain fund. They already have a pretty good amount in the treasury, but nothing like what will be necessary. Go out and help them and "fill up."

Pot-Pourri

A New Spring Joke—What are the Planters to do?—Good Bye, Girls—Summer Pastimes. . .

The best joke of the season was perpetrated in one of our local banks last week, and was on this wise:

A certain bachelor, who is fond of a joke and has an awfully red head, stepped up to the window of the assistant cashier in the aforesaid bank, and noticing the bald plate of the assistant cashier shining like an ivory billiard ball remarked:

"Well, I see the night riders scraped your head last night."

The assistant cashier, with his usual sangfroid, kept on counting his money while the gentleman with the abundant crop of fiery red hair waited patiently for a reply. He got it, and got it hot, too. Calmly, and with a smile playing about his face the assistant cashier looked his man in the eye and said:

"I would rather they had scraped my head than to have sowed it with such a crop of red-top as you have."

The red-headed bachelor retired without saying a word. When the joke leaked out one of his friends asked him what he said. His reply, with a thoroughly convinced look in his face, was: "There wasn't anything to say." "The Duke of Buckingham wasn't on the field" any more that day.

Anent this plant-bed scraping it looks pretty hard on a fellow to be called out at night and forced to use the hoe on his own bed. It's getting to the point now where it's neither safe for a man to be in the association nor out of it. At least it looks like things are going that way, and the balance of the farmers will do well to move to town to keep out of trouble. Being a S. E. man doesn't seem to protect a fellow, and then as farmers are beginning to scrape their own beds to keep from raising a crop, it's like a man selling his own cow. He has to do the milking. Max Meyer doesn't milk any cows, but he slaughters lots of them. He has joined the association, he says.

Rev. E. H. Bull, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, is fond of hunting, and though not as good a shot as Mat Stirling, with whom he often goes in the field in bird season, he is above the average with the gun. As the birds have been under the protection of the law for some time Mr. Bull has been amusing himself shooting at the pestiferous English sparrows with a target gun. He has thinned out the noisy birds pretty well already and will have vegetables to eat himself, instead of having them go into the stomachs of the birds that infest the buildings in the preacher's neighborhood. Pity it is that somebody else doesn't do as the parson. Boys, get out your target guns, when school closes, but don't violate the law.

The music festival kept Gentry's Dog and Pony Show from coming here, but don't despair, children. Gentry has always done a good business here and is not liable to give Hopkinsville the go-by this year. It's highly probable that we will have one or two good circuses here this summer, but if they should not come the theatricums, hay rides, picnics, fishing and boating parties and many things ought to keep part of the people, at least from dying with unbroken ennui.

After to-day the college girls will be missed until fall. For a long time we will not see them marching by twos down town and will miss the pit-a-pat of their little feet on the sidewalk as much as the men who sell candy and ices will miss their nickels. Such is life! And we will miss the college boys, too. For awhile the knots of young fellows, making things merry on the corners by their guys and jokes, will be at home resting up for another term of hard work. Though the lads sometimes seem a little "loud," don't let us forget that "boys will be boys," and those of us who are not women were once boys ourselves. A happy vacation at home and a safe return to "Hoptown" next term to all of you, young ladies and gentlemen!

A Hard Dept to Pay.

"I owe a debt of gratitude that can never be paid off," writes G. S. Clark, of Westfield, Iowa, "for my rescue from death, by Dr. King's New Discovery. The ominous dry, hacking cough quit before the first bottle was used, and two more bottles made a complete cure." Nothing has ever equaled New Discovery for coughs, colds and all throat and lung complaints. Guaranteed by R. C. Hardwick, druggist, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.
